CMPS Annual Conference: Nancy J Chodorow Sexuality as Compromise Formation: A Clinically Unique and Creative Solution

by Lucy Holmes

On Saturday, December 1, 2012, the Center for Modern Psychoanalytic Studies (CMPS) held its annual conference at New York University's Eisner and Lubin Auditorium. The keynote speaker, Dr. Nancy J. Chodorow, is one of the luminaries of psychoanalysis today. She is a faculty member at the Boston Psychoanalytic Society and Institute, the Pittsburgh Psychoanalytic Institute, the San Francisco Center for Psychoanalysis, the Harvard Medical School and the University of California at Berkeley. Dr. Chodorow has authored many books including the seminal "The Reproduction of Mothering" and her personal favorite, "The Power of Feelings."

Before one of the largest audiences in CMPS conference history, Dr. Chodorow presented ideas from her latest book "Individualizing Gender and Sexuality: Theory and Practice." She emphasized that each person's sexuality is a compromise formation and is clinically unique. While giving credit to Freud for pointing out the importance of gender and sexuality and for describing certain patterns in our psychosexual development which help us understand our patients, she pointed out that there are many masculinities, femininities and sexualities. Dr. Chodorow described some of the elements that go into the creation of each person's unique sexuality. They include bodily sex gender created from a particularity of feelings and history; an internal world of fantasies and object relations; cultural and linguistic influences; a unique affective tonality which expresses an individual's attitude toward his or her gender and sexuality; and finally, elements that would not obviously be linked to sexuality, such as fantasies that women who have delayed pregnancy have about time. These elements and many more create a unique prevalent animation of gender and sexuality, which may be relatively insignificant in the psychic life of a particular patient, or very, very important. Dr. Chodorow presented cases from her own practice which illustrated clinically the patterns she described.

The CMPS community had been encouraged to read Chodorow's latest book and to formulate questions

BGSP Massachusetts Legislative Update

by Carol Panetta

Legislation protecting psychoanalysts suffered a setback at the end of July when the bill failed to come up for a vote on the House floor. The bill, HB 4123, proposed to restrict the practice of psychotherapy to licensed individuals and proposed licenses for autonomous psychoanalytic psychotherapists and autonomous psychoanalysts. The legislation successfully made it through a number of Joint (Senate and House) Committees. Despite some strong, very last-minute opposition from the Massachusetts Psychological Association, Massachusetts Mental Health Counselors Association, and others, the bill was scheduled for debate on the final day of formal sessions by the Massachusetts House of Representatives. However, the session expired before the bill was brought to the floor.

THE CHALLENGE going forward is the continuing threat of legislation restricting the practice of psychotherapy to licensed individuals, with no provisions for autonomous psychoanalysts. Since the current session began January 1, 2013, the bill has been reintroduced and the situation is changing rapidly. Key legislators continue to support the licensing of autonomous psychoanalysts though the opposition has rallied. Legislation protecting psychoanalysts will continue to require a tremendous amount of local and national support.

to submit. Dr. Lucy Holmes, Conference Chair, and Tracy Morgan, advanced candidate at CMPS led the question and answer session using these gathered and edited questions. After introducing each other, Dr. Holmes and Ms Morgan both stated that their interest in psychoanalysis and female development had been inspired by Dr. Chodorow's first book, "The Reproduction of Mothering." The questions presented were thoughtful and diverse, and the theme of Chodorow's answers was that, as far as gender and sexuality go, "It's complicated!"

IN THE AFTERNOON SESSION Nicholas Ganoudis, CMPS certificate candidate, and Patrice LaMariana, CMPS faculty, each presented a fascinating case to Dr. Chodorow and the audience. The cases, a heterosexual woman and a homosexual man, demonstrated vivid sexual dynamics. Mr. Ganoudis and Ms. LaMariana both effectively provided clinical material which demonstrated many of the techniques unique to modern analysis. Dr. Chodorow was struck by the way in which our community uses induced feelings and emotional communication to work with patients.

Dr. Chodorow was responsive to Afternoon Case Presentations.

AFTER THE CLINICAL PRESENTATIONS, the audience broke up into smaller workshops. In these groups led by CMPS faculty members, conference participants had the opportunity to process the rich material presented during the day. A wine and cheese social concluded this memorable event.

L-r: NYGSP Master's candidates: Jacqueline Ambrosini, Jamie Katz,, and Akiya Daube. Mr. Daube's lapel pin indicates his status as one of many volunteers who worked to make the Conference run smoothly.

L-R: Dr. Nancy J Chodorow, Conference Chair, Dr. Lucy Holmes, and Dr. Elliot Zeisel, CMPS faculty and Director of Group Training.

Vermont Society of Modern Psychoanalysis Salon:

Analytic Group Better than Individual Analysis?

by Bonnie Irwin

What could be better than individual analysis? Analytic group can be better. In some cases, group can provide experiences which individual work with an analyst cannot. That was the thrust of the presentation by Mrs. Katherine Morrell, Lic. & N.C.PsyA, at the October 2nd Vermont Society of Modern Psychoanalysis (VGSP) afternoon Salon. Mrs. Morrell presented the history of group and gave a summary of the benefits of group work. She explained to her audience that groups enable members of the group to see how others respond to them. The group provides a diversity of responses, giving the patient more information about his effect on those around him. Group also provides the chance to practice new behaviors. The discussion was animated. Members and guests in attendance added comments, questions, and examples of group experiences. Dr. Barry Waterson, the discussant for the October Salon, added his perspective as a group leader with over twenty years experience.

Following the Salon, the Vermont Society of Modern Psychoanalysis convened its annual meeting. Three positions on VSMP's Board of Directors were filled by unanimous vote of the meeting. New Board members are Alice Abraham, Michael Carter, & Barry Waterson.

The next Salon will be held in the spring. The Board is open to suggestions for topics and presenters. For more information, contact Bonnie Irwin at: birwin@myfairpoint.net.

ACAP— Trauma & Resilience in the Face of Hurricane Sandy

by Vicki Semel

THIS FALL WAS A DIFFICULT YET IMPORTANT TIME at the Academy of Clinical and Applied Psychoanalysis (ACAP). As New Jersey and other metropolitan areas struggled through the aftermath of Hurricane Sandy, we were more and more convinced of the importance of ACAP's new initiative on Trauma and Resilience. Pat Bratt was the catalyst for this program and especially for the belief that to study trauma, it is essential to know the power of resilience that is both constitutionally ingrained and developed from a supportive environment in order to fully make use of modern analytic interventions.

From ACAP's Summer's Conference at Caldwell College on Trauma and Resilience, to workshops this fall and winter, to courses within the Certificate program, much of the orientation at ACAP has been to examine the effects of trauma on constitution, personal sensitivity, and developmental experiences. Modern psychoanalytic formulations that examine the narcissistic defense and maladaptive responses to frustration all seem relevant to this growing interest. ACAP is reaching out to teach and train not only first responders, but secondary responders such as mental health workers, educators and child life specialists among others. Our focus is on helping to identify the characteristics of emotionally resilient people and developing strategies for enhancing those characteristics.

CMPS and NYGSP Graduation

OCTOBER 21ST, 2012 was one of those ideal autumn afternoons, warm and suffused with brilliant light, the perfect day for the joint graduation ceremonies of the New York Graduate School of Psychoanalysis and the Center for Modern Psychoanalytic Studies. Held in the Great Hall, (at right) Dr. Mimi Crowell welcomed a full house of the graduates, their family and friends, alumni and faculty, acknowledging the collaborative efforts of all that made this celebratory occasion possible.

NYGSP graduates read their personal logs. These recitations are always moving as students reflect on their deep, and often surprising emotional experiences in the course of attaining their Masters degree. And while there is a commonality to their experience, each log is a unique expression of the individual.

Following the logs, Dr. Crowell, Program Director, NYGSP and Mr. Lieber, Administrative Director, NYGSP, presented diplomas to the 2011 graduates, Mireia Lifante-Gali, Ronit Rogov-Malinovitz, Bernard Rubin, Marcus M. Silverman, and the 2012 graduates, Loryn Hatch, Alisa M. Krieger, Lisa Landphair (shown above left reading her personal log), Christian David Akilu Tesema, Andre E. Turcotte, and Theodore Wheeler. Dr. Nicole Kirman, Research Committee Chair, presented the Rose F. McAloon Award for Excellence in a Master's Thesis which this year was split between two recipients:

*Loryn Hatch and Theodore Wheeler.

Dr. Crowell then gave an introduction to the CMPS Graduates' final logs, reflecting on the long and complex process of emotional, academic and personal growth required to produce a Modern Psychoanalyst. Each graduate then read his or her Final Log—the culmination of that process.

The diplomas recognizing the attainment of Certification in Psychoanalysis were presented by Dr. Crowell, President, CMPS and Ms Newsome, Chairman of the Board, CMPS to the Class of 2011, Mark James Buenzle, Ruth Parker Cashman, Jo Ellen Loth and the Class of 2012, Cheryl Kramer, Matthew Lipp, Amelie Strauss Maslansky and Sybil Schacht.

Dr. Kirman, Chair of the Research Committee presented the Phyllis W. Meadow Award for Excellence in a Final Research Project to *Mark Buenzle, for his paper "Standing where the Towers Fell: A study of psychic and physical collapse and reconstruction".

The ceremonies were followed by a champagne reception hosted by the Alumni Association and produced through the efforts of the Graduation Committee: Jennifer Wade, Stephen Guttman, Marsha Breitman, Joan Israel and Ron Lieber.
